

DISCO bulletin

News

This first part of 2020 has been somewhat different than normal, and we have experienced a pandemic which has overloaded the ICUs around the world. DISCO was set on hold because of this situation, in the end of March, to spare the hospital personnel the extra pressure the study would bring. Some sites are still struggling with COVID-19 but the good news is that a few sites will restart recruitment shortly and others are planning on starting up the study again after the summer. We hope that the inflow of COVID-19 patients will continue to decline so that the world can go back to normal and scientific-studies can be restarted.

Update

Holland have started their first site in Radmoud and included their first patient in the beginning of June.

France is waiting for their local ethic committee approval and we hope they will get a positive answers soon.

Denmark has sent in an application to their ethic committee and hopefully they can start recruiting after the summer.
